By Jim Salter
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Patriot Coal Corp. has asked the U.S. Bankruptcy Court to modify collective bargaining agreements with the United Mine Workers of America, allowing the company to cut health care coverage for retired miners.

St. Louis-based Patriot also sought to change wages, benefits and work rules for existing workers in an effort to make the company more competitive, saying in a filing Thursday that the actions are necessary to save more than 4,000 current jobs.

Patriot operates the Highland and Dodge Hill mines in Union County; closed two mines last year in Henderson County; and is responsible for the retiree benefits of thousands of former Peabody Coal co. retirees from the area.

Patriot filed for bankruptcy in July, citing exceptionally weak coal markets, increasing costs and “unsustainable legacy liabilities.” The company said that since the filing, coal markets have only gotten worse.

“Without the cost relief we are seeking, all of these jobs will be lost and it will no longer be possible to provide health care for more than 23,000 employees,

Fundraiser parade will honor Watkins

Community service is theme

A local nonprofit agency plans to honor a beloved Henderson County resident through an event that is geared toward benefiting other nonprofit agencies in the county.

Backyard Games of America is sponsoring a “Judge Sandy Watkins Dusk-To-Dawn Day Parade” at 10 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 14.

The theme of the parade is “Community Service,” said BYGA’s Chairman and President Lawrence Butler. The Dusk-To-Dawn is a remembrance of the days of Watkins’ life.

“In Tennessee (where he once lived), I had many, many names,” Butler said. “None were mine. When Sandy looked at me, I was Lawrence Butler or Mr. Butler. That made me feel great. He stood behind me when no one else would.”

“I want this to take off and become an annual event,” he said. “This community loved him and this is a way for all of us to come together and honor him.”

The parade will follow the same route as the Christmas parade, Butler said.

Nonprofit agencies are encouraged to participate by entering a float.

“There will be a $1,000 prize awarded to the best float,” he said. There is a $25 entry fee for floats.

Area bands are encouraged to participate, as well, Butler said, adding that the band voted as the best in the parade will win a $500 prize. There is no entry fee for the bands.

“We want to add a dog walk,” he said. Anyone wishing to walk their dog in the parade will pay a

East Heights Elementary first-grader Daniel Kirk did his best acting the part of an exercise rider — even when asked to don oversized goggles and a too-large helmet.

Kirk was one of many students who volunteered to participate in the Kentucky Derby Museum outreach program, which stopped by East Heights Wednesday.

The first-graders were taught a lesson on caring for thoroughbreds, which could be applied to how to care for their pet or even for themselves, said Heather Hill, outreach educator with the Kentucky

Derby Museum. Asking Kirk to wear a protective vest, goggles and helmets emphasized safety.

“We’re going to put on goggles to protect his...” Hill asked the first-graders.

“Eyes!,” the kids answered.

Each of the outreach program’s lessons were age-appropriate and in line with state content standards.

Melissa Walker, Family Resource Center coordinator at East Heights, learned about the program through an outreach email from the Kentucky Derby museum. Walker had been searching for an interactive activity that

Employee training group up, running

Discount classes offered

As the nation’s economy continues trying to find its feet, the need for employee training remains important even as business, nonprofit and industries’ training budgets might still be lean.

The newly resurrected Northwest Kentucky Training Consortium is trying to fill the gap. The nonprofit organization offers discount-priced classes — most cost $75 or less per person — by bringing multiple employers together and securing state grants.

A descendant of the former federally funded Tri-county Training Consortium, the NKTC launched its first season of classes last fall and is expanding its schedule this year.

Class topics are being driven by employers’ requests, including from a board of directors comprised largely of representatives of area industries, according to Executive Director Ellen Redding.

Topics so far have included safety, leadership, team-building, soft skills, social media, technical services and computers.

Industries often need classes for employees who have been promoted into supervisory positions but have no experience in management, while existing managers could benefit from employment law and interviewing techniques classes.

The consortium is also preparing to offer 10-hour

Murray president on way out

The Associated Press

MURRAY, Ky. — The Murray State Board of Regents has voted not to extend the contract of President Randy Dunn and begin a search for a new president of the southwestern Kentucky school.

The 7-4 vote came Friday afternoon and will bring Dunn's tenure to an end June 30, 2014.

University spokeswoman Catherine Sivills says the board is pushing for a plan to find Dunn's replacement at its May meeting.

The university tapped Dunn as its 11th president in May of 2006 and he took over the job on Dec. 1, 2006. Before arriving at Murray State, Dunn served as the State Superintendent of Education for the Illinois State Board of Education.

In 2012, Dunn interviewed for the presidency of Missouri State University and interviewed to become the next Florida Commissioner of Education.

State housing is on rebound

The Associated Press

OWENSBORO— The Director of the Kentucky Housing Corp. says the agency is starting to see the housing market bounce back from the economic downturn that began in 2008.

According to the Messenger-Inquirer Rick McQuady told the Green River Area Development District Board of Directors that the state housing finance agency has seen "an increased demand for low- and moderate-income home ownership" and is starting to make money again.

Before 2008, McQuady said housing investments would turn a 4 to 5 percent profit.

"We were borrowing at 4.5 percent and loaning it out at 5.5 percent, so we were making money and that would pay our operating expenses."

Afterward, the delinquency and foreclosure rates rose from around 5 percent to about 20 percent.

Contractor charged with receiving stolen property

By Erin Schmitt

A Henderson contractor has been charged with receiving stolen property in connection with items stolen from several stores.

David Golday, 53, 1600 block of Sterling Creek Drive, was arrested Thursday and charged with four felony counts of receiving stolen property under $10,000 and two counts of receiving stolen property under $500.

Detective Shannon Troutman with Henderson Police Department said he'd been investigating the case for about two weeks, but the alleged thefts stretched back longer.

"This has been an investigation into property that has been stolen over the past four years," said Troutman.

Police recovered in excess of 100 items from Golday's home. The items ranged from ink pens and ear buds to machinery, electrical equipment and plumbing equipment, along with many other things.

Troutman said he could not say if Golday was using his profession to commit theft. The charges against Golday stem from property stolen from Lowe's, Office Depot, Kmart, Rural King and possibly other locations.

As part of the investigation, Golday was brought into the police department for an interview Thursday night. Information gleaned from the interview led to Golday's arrest, the detective said.

He was taken to the Henderson County Detention Center and then released on his own recognizance Thursday night, Troutman said. No bond was set.

It's possible more charges will be filed, Troutman said. The detective said he is investigating the possibilities that Golday was working with other people and that he was selling the items.

Anyone with information about this investigation may call Troutman at 831-1295.

Evansville will soon need new area code

Staff report

Evansville Mayor Lloyd Winnecke is encouraging area residents to express their preferences at hearing Tuesday evening concerning possible changes for phone listings when the current "812" area code region runs out of available numbers for new service. Hosted by the Indiana Utility Regulatory Commission, the hearing is scheduled for 6 p.m. Tuesday at Washington

Middle School, 1801 Washington Ave. in Evansville.

The North American Numbering Plan Administrator predicts the 812 area code will run out of available phone numbers by March 2015, according to the IURC. The area code serves 38 counties in Southern and Central Indiana.

The shortage is caused by population growth, economic growth and the demand for new services, including cellphones.

"Although steps have been taken to delay the area code's exhaust date, there comes a point in time when relief is necessary," according to information on the IURC website.

The IURC is being asked to consider two options: A geographic split would result in the existing area being divided into two or more area codes, while an overlay option allows for a new area code to be assigned to new users within the same geographic area.

A second area code is coming to western Kentucky in 2014 that will require 10-digit dialing — using the area code plus the phone number — for local as well as long distance calls.

The 364 area code will be superimposed onto the region's existing 270 area code, meaning two area codes will coexist in western Kentucky.

Current landline and cell-phone customers will keep their current area code and phone numbers; the new 364 area code will be given to future phone customers, starting in 2014.

The Federal Communications Commission has broad jurisdiction over telephone number issues, but it delegates authority to the states on how to introduce new area codes, IURC officials say.

More information about the 812 area code change is available at www.in.gov/iurc/2703.htm.

AT&T says 4G LTE service is officially in Henderson

By Chuck Stinnett
cstinnett@thegleaner.com
270-831-8343

Although it's been unofficially available here for a few months, AT&T Wireless says it officially has launched high-speed 4G LTE wireless access to the Henderson-Evansville area.

The new service means that consumers with AT&T's 4G LTE-compatible smartphones and tablet computers can download data several times faster than with the older 3G service. That means accessing websites or downloading files such as photos or software updates much faster.

4G LTE stands for "fourth generation" and "long-term evolution" technology.

Verizon Wireless was first to this market with 4G LTE. It introduced the service in December 2011 in Evansville and January 2012 in Henderson.

AT&T's 4G service was quietly activated in

CHUCK STINNETT / THE GLEANER

The wireless antenna atop this 155-foot-high American Tower Corp. mast behind Big Lots on Outer Second Street is among the sites from which AT&T Wireless is providing high-speed 4G LTE service to smartphones and tablets.

Henderson late last fall, though the company didn't formally announce its availability until a week ago.

The two rivals have been engaged in a lengthy marketing war over which offers the fastest or most widespread service.

Verizon says it provides 4G LTE service in 480 cities across the country, while AT&T says it offers the service in 153 markets.

However, AT&T claims its 4G LTE speeds, where available, are faster.

It points to a PC World magazine article in April 2012 that found that in a test involving four wireless providers in a dozen or major cities across the country, AT&T provided the fastest 4G download speeds at 9.12 megabits per second, outdoing Verizon's 7.35 mbps.

Such speeds approach the basic cable modem speeds available to home broadband users and, in PC World's words, are "top-of-the-line."

Both AT&T and Verizon's speeds beat those available from T-Mobile and Sprint.

AT&T also claims that in areas where it doesn't yet offer 4G LTE service, it offers a technology called 4G HSPA+ that it says is faster than competitors' 3G service.

Whistleblowing miner not punished

The Associated Press

LEXINGTON — A coal miner from eastern Kentucky who provided information on safety violations that led to federal criminal convictions will not be punished after a state panel decided not to impose a penalty for committing a legal violation.

The Kentucky Office of Mine Safety and Licensing on Thursday ruled that 41-year-old Mackie Bailey took part in using a machine exposed to potential roof falls. But, because he later reported the violation, his miner certification should not be affected.

Bailey worked at the Manalapan Mining Co.'s P-1 mine near Pathfork, in Harlan County, in the first half of 2011.

Bailey operated a machine that installed bolts in the mine roof to keep it from falling. As employees advanced the mine into the mountain in June 2011, they hit a spot where the roof rose so high that the temporary support bar wouldn't reach it, according to Bailey and court records. That left miners using the machine exposed to unsupported sections of rock, which can lead to roof falls.

Bailey said he told supervisors about the problem but was told to keep working. One supervisor threatened to fire him in late June 2011 when he refused to bolt a section of the mine, Bailey said. The next day, David Partin, 49, of Pineville, was killed when a section of rock collapsed on him at the mine, according to a federal investigation.

Guns are scapegoat for people's actions

Contrary to what you see and read about violent crime in the USA, statistics show it has dramatically decreased since the 1970s. Images of horrific shootings play a huge part of the perception of our country gone gun-crazy, but in actuality, we're a safer society.

Sure many of the popular TV programs and movies depict murders and all sorts of horrific acts, but the truth is 99.999 percent of us have never seen or will never see a murder. So if violent crimes are decreasing, why does it feel like they're increasing?

Fort Hood shooting: 12 murdered, 31 injured. Aurora cinema shooting: 12 murdered, 58 injured. Sandy Hook shooting: 27 murdered. What do these mass killings have in common, other than all three murderers used a gun? The Fort Hood Army doctor's motives were not driven by mental illness, so being crazy is not the connection. These three mass killings exceeded a threshold that most can't handle.

More than 60 children were shot dead in the streets of Chicago last year, but since they were spread out in the calendar year, we somehow consider it tolerable. Rather than holding people responsible for their actions and seeking justice for those affected, guns have taken the blame of late. If you're not convinced of this premise, just take a look at a killer that exceeds gun deaths.

Statistics show there are 25 alcohol-related deaths every day on our roads. But just as we do with guns, since the deaths are spread out among the states, we dilute the number as we turn a blind eye. If there was a drunken driving crash every day that claimed 37 lives, like the 1988 Carrollton bus crash, do you think lawmakers would ban or limit the consumption of Budweiser, Jack Daniels, Makers Mark, etc.?

The most glaring double standard of how guns and alcohol are viewed happened during a two-week period at the end of last year.

Bob Costas, a respected NBC Sports analyst, told his audience if the distraught NFL player not had a gun, he and his girlfriend would still be alive. A week later, another NFL player, driving while drunk, wrecked his car and killed the passenger.

Did Bob Costas go on national TV the next week and say, "If the player didn't drink alcohol, his friend and teammate would be alive"? Of course not. Alcohol advertising in the NFL is big money.

Why give money to those who hate us?

A friend made the observation that she was certain there was no life on other planets because if there was the United States of America would be sending them foreign aid.

She was curious as to how many of the financial crises discussed daily on CNN would be minimized if the U.S. allocated those funds internally instead of sending them to countries I never heard of and probably could not pronounce the name nor tell you what continent they existed on.

I read in The Gleaner that Secretary Clinton visited 112 countries during her stint as secretary of state. Does anyone know how many of those we contribute aid to? I wonder how many of those who accept aid have a sincere hatred of the United States.

Somewhere I heard an expression that "Charity begins at home."

Coal vital in future energy plans

With the rising price of gasoline making everything more expensive, it is difficult to envision any good that may come from it. Let's speculate on the potential positive outcome for Henderson, Ky.

One realistic alternative to the gasoline fueled internal combustion engine is the electric motor. And electricity for electric motor-powered vehicles can be produced with domestic fuel created from coal produced in the Kentucky coal mines.

Henderson, for example, is in a uniquely favorable position because it is surrounded by rich coal fields and numerous coal mines operating in the area with seasoned miners and support personnel readily available.

Henderson also has the advantage of inexpensive transportation since it is located on the bank of the Ohio River and at the junction of two interstate highways as well as a railway.

Henderson could be a major factor in future energy production.

CITIZEN COLUMN

By Jay Randolph
Special to The Gleaner

After following the current events and decisions being made by the city commission members pertaining to the importance of projects in Henderson, I thought I would follow up on one main topic that caught my eye.

I have a son who frequents the skate ramps and often complains about the poor upkeep, lack of available skating space and poor overall condition of the ramps compared to our neighboring city of Evansville's skate ramps.

Upon arrival to the skate ramp area I noticed a group of teenage children sweeping the skating area free of debris with a broom they had brought from home. I surveyed the area around the skate park, although the area is smaller than an outdoor basketball court, and the placement of this area was very poorly chosen.

It is surrounded by trees that are always dropping buds, leaves or limbs onto the skate area. The hill that rises above the skate park, which is not reinforced in any fashion, spills mud and debris onto the skating surface when it rains.

The actual ramps appear to be in decent condition, but there is a serious lack of ramps or available skating space. It was as if the city of Henderson chose the worst spot available to slap some blacktop and skate ramps down and call it a skate park.

I know that decisions pertaining to how grant money should be spent are tough and not everyone is going to be happy, but in my opinion I feel that we could have spent a little less for the downtown tennis court renovations and the river walk and maybe put a little of the money we could have saved into building something a little more desirable for the FUTURE of our city.

I think the youth today are often overlooked when it comes to providing entertainment. We provide little to no recreational activity for our youth and then wonder why they engage in criminal activities or behavior. I know that "kids are going to be kids" and less than desirable activities are going to happen, but adults OFTEN engage in less than desirable activities.

Maybe The Gleaner could do a little investigative reporting as to the pitfalls of the current location, lack of maintenance and poor condition of the skate park and assist our youth in trying to obtain a better location and facility that would draw not only more of our youth but youth from our neighboring cities to enjoy this wonderful town as much as I do.

I think a lot of adults have forgotten the trials and tribulations that we endured as kids and are overlooking the fun and excitement we all shared when going to our local arcades, cruising the riverfront, skipping the movies to go to Pizza Hut, cruising the bowling alley, Skateway and several other locations and activities that were designed for us as teens.

I think it is time that we need to stand up and speak for our youth the same way our parents stood and spoke for us. Our children give us so much every day. It is time we give something back to them.

CITIZEN COLUMN

By Russ Brown
Special to The Gleaner

I suppose each of us have a certain routine. Mine of course, after preparing for another day, is to retrieve The Gleaner, scan the front page and then go to the obituaries.

Finding that my name wasn't mentioned, I then focus on the opinion page. My primary purpose for writing is to question what is happening to America and to give my observation as well.

Either 90 percent of our elected U.S. congressmen and senators are brain-dead, or our president is the smartest to ever grace the White House. Take your choice.

Being in my 80s, my predetermined life expectancy is rapidly approaching. If my maker allows me another morning, I will again question what America's destiny is. Will it become a socialist nation or will it allow the United Nations to govern her? I pray neither.

A vast number of men and women have given much to preserve our freedoms. Are we now on the verge of giving it up?

On Feb. 26, on the front page of this newspaper was an article assessing the effects of sequestration. The sum given was $20 million for Kentucky alone.

Does it not occur to anyone that if some of the foolish spending by our so-called leaders were put in check we would not be in such a mess?

If you prefer to see how really wasteful we really are, request from Citizens Against Government Waste a copy providing you item by item, bill by bill. Also providing how each representative and senator voted and much more.

It will blow your mind or at least make your blood pressure seek a new level.

Think about these being on our plate. Why do we provide so much to the United Nations and money to nations which are hell-bent on our destruction?

Another thought — I think the president misuses Air Force One for political trips disguised as something else. The cost is roughly $180,000 per hour not to mention the cost of related expenses such as another plane, cargo and the expense for the state he is going to. He also usually has three automobiles which must be transported to be in place when Air Force One touches down.

How much would be saved if he stayed in Washington a whole week attending to business?

While I am concerned with the first family, is it not shocking that every first lady in our history had either one or two personal aides while Mrs. Obama has at her disposal 20 or more with a salary of $1,591,200? Incidentally this information came from Canadian news sources. I am not placing blame on any one party, but to those who are supposed to represent we the people and to the news media to keep us informed with correct data.

Call me crazy if you so desire. There are times that I would agree, but this is not one of those times. I am just concerned at what's on the horizon for America.

U.S. to increase missile defense

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon announced Friday that it will spend $1 billion to add 14 interceptors to a West Coast-based missile defense system, responding to what it called faster-than-anticipated North Korean progress on nuclear weapons and missiles.

In announcing the decision, Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel said he is determined to ensure protection of the U.S. homeland and stay ahead of the North Korean missile threat. He acknowledged that the interceptors already in place to defend against potential North Korean missile launches have had poor test performances.

“We will strengthen our homeland defense, maintain our commitment to our allies and partners, and make clear to the world that the United States stands firm against aggression,” Hagel told a Pentagon news conference.

The Pentagon intends to add the 14 interceptors to 26 already in place at Fort Greely, Alaska. That will expand the system’s ability to shoot down long-range missiles in flight before they could reach U.S. territory. In addition to those at Greely, the U.S. also has four missile interceptors at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif.

Hagel said the 14 extras should be in place by September 2017 but will not be deployed until they have been adequately tested.

James Miller, undersecretary of defense for policy, said the project would cost about $1 billion.

Miller and Hagel said the U.S. will conduct environmental studies on three additional potential locations for interceptors in the U.S., including on the East Coast, as required by Congress. Hagel said that no decision on a particular site has been made, but that the studies would shorten the timeline should a decision be made.

Miller said that would provide options for building an interceptor base on the East Coast or adding more interceptors in Alaska, should either approach become necessary because of further threat from Iran and North Korea.

The threat of a missile strike from North Korea was the rationale for building the missile defense sites in Alaska and California during the administration of President George W. Bush. Technical difficulties with the interceptors slowed the pace at which they were installed at Greely and Vandenberg.

MARYLAND

Death penalty repeal vote passed

ANNAPOLIS — Maryland lawmakers approved a measure abolishing the death penalty Friday and sent the bill to Gov. Martin O’Malley, who has long supported banning capital punishment.

The House of Delegates voted 82-56 for legislation already approved by the Senate. Eighty Democrats and two Republicans voted for the bill, which needed 71 to pass. Eighteen Democrats joined 38 Republicans to vote against it.

The vote represented a major win for the Democratic governor, who has pushed for the death penalty’s repeal for five years. He also is widely believed to be weighing a presidential bid in 2016.

Officials in new city manager’s hands

DETROIT — What role Detroit’s elected leaders will play in the city’s fiscal crisis is now up to a Washington, D.C., lawyer appointed by the governor to turn things around.

Detroit’s emergency manager, Kevyn Orr, said he wants to work with the City Council and the mayor, though many in Detroit see the state takeover as stripping away the voice of the people to have their elected leaders lead.

“I’d like to have full partnership with the council and their staffs,” said Orr, a 1983 University of Michigan Law School graduate who resigned from the international Jones Day law firm to take the emergency manager job. Orr was the turnaround expert who represented Chrysler during its successful restructuring.

Man who set fire to sub is sentenced

PORTLAND — A shipyard worker who set fire to rags aboard a nuclear submarine because he wanted to go home was sentenced to a little more than 17 years in federal prison Friday for the blaze that transformed the vessel into a fiery furnace, injured seven people and caused about $450 million in damage.

Casey James Fury also was ordered to pay $400 million in restitution by a judge who weighed his lack of criminal record and the severity of the fire before imposing a 205-month prison sentence.

The 25-year-old Fury, formerly of Portsmouth, N.H., pleaded guilty to setting the May 23 fire while the USS Miami was undergoing a dry dock overhaul.

Donor in rabies case was Air Force recruit

WASHINGTON — The Defense Department says a man whose organs were donated to four people before it was learned he had rabies was in the Air Force.

Spokeswoman Cynthia O. Smith identified the donor as a 20-year-old North Carolina man who had been in the Air Force for about 17 weeks before he died in 2011. He was training to become an aviation mechanic in Pensacola, Fla., when he became sick.

A Maryland patient who received one of the man’s kidneys later died of rabies. Authorities are treating three other people who got organs from the donor.

Officials say they’re trying to identify people who were in close contact with the donor or the recipients.

North Dakota abortion ban close

By James Macpherson
Associated Press

BISMARCK, N.D. — North Dakota on Friday moved one step closer to adopting what would be the most restrictive abortion laws in the country, with lawmakers sending the Republican governor measures that could set the state up for a costly legal battle over the U.S. Supreme Court decision that legalized the procedure.

The North Dakota Senate approved two anti-abortion bills Friday, one banning abortions as early as six weeks into a pregnancy and another prohibiting the procedure because of genetic defects such as Down syndrome. If the governor signs the measures, North Dakota would be the only state in the U.S. with those laws.

Supporters said their goal is to challenge the Supreme Court’s 1973 Roe v. Wade ruling that legalized abortion up until a fetus is considered viable, usually at 22 to 24 weeks, though anti-abortion activists elsewhere have expressed concern about the strategy.

babies,” said state Rep. Bette Grande, R-Fargo, who introduced both bills. The state’s only abortion clinic is in Fargo, and abortion rights advocates say the bills are meant to shut it down.

Gov. Jack Dalrymple hasn’t said anything to indicate that he won’t approve the measures.

Debate Friday was brief, with the Senate taking about an hour to pass both measures. No one spoke against the so-called fetal heartbeat bill, which the Senate took up immediately after passing the genetic abnormalities bill.

Opponents, who have promised legal challenges if they become law, urged Dalrymple to veto the bills.

U.N. says drones violate sovereignty

ISLAMABAD — The head of a U.N. team investigating casualties from U.S. drone strikes in Pakistan declared after a secret research trip to the country that the attacks violate Pakistan’s sovereignty.

Ben Emmerson, the U.N. special rapporteur on human rights and counterterrorism, said the Pakistani government made clear to him that it does not consent to the strikes — a position that has been disputed by U.S. officials.

President Barack Obama has stepped up covert CIA drone strikes targeting al-Qaida and Taliban militants in Pakistan’s tribal region along the Afghan border since he took office in 2009.

The strikes have caused growing controversy because of the secrecy surrounding them and claims that they have caused significant civilian casualties.

New oil revenue law goes into effect

SAO PAULO — A new oil law that gives a greater share of royalty revenues from Brazil’s vast oil fields to nonproducing states went into effect Friday, and producing states filed appeals against it with the Supreme Court.

The law was published in the official gazette after President Dilma Rousseff signed it Thursday.

The new law shares oil royalties, from existing and future drilling and production concessions, more evenly among all of Brazil’s 27 states instead of favoring top oil producers such as Rio de Janeiro, Espírito Santo and Sao Paulo states.

Officials in Rio de

Janeiro, the largest producing state, have said the law will deprive Rio of $1.7 billion in 2013 alone, endangering preparations for the 2014 World Cup and the 2016 Olympics.

Christians allege they were tortured

Dozens of Coptic Christians were tortured inside a detention center run by a powerful militia in eastern Libya, two of the recently released detainees told The Associated Press on Friday amid a wave of assaults targeting Christians in Benghazi and the latest instance of alleged abuse by Libyan security forces.

The two, among an estimated 50 Egyptian Christians who have been detained in Libya on suspicion of proselytizing, told of being rounded up in a market by gunmen who checked their right wrists for tattoos of crosses.

“They first checked our wrists searching for the crosses and if they found them, we (had to) get into their cars,” said Amgad Zaki, 26.

Zaki said a group of men — some in uniform and some in civilian clothes — rounded up Egyptians selling clothes in a market called el-Jareed in Benghazi on Feb. 26. He and other Christians climbed into SUVs that he said carried the sign of Libya Shield One, one of the most powerful militias in Benghazi, which is under the command of Islamist and ex-rebel Wassam Bin Hemad.

“They shaved our heads. They threatened to sever our heads in implementation of Islamic Shariah (law) while showing us swords,” said Zaki, who was interviewed after returning to Egypt this month.

Sunni protesters hold a flag that reads, “Muhammad is the Prophet of God,” at an anti-government rally Friday in Fallujah. Elsewhere in Iraq, officials say several worshippers were wounded as security forces tried to prevent them from reaching a prominent Baghdad mosque.

Iraqi police clash with Sunni worshippers in Baghdad

By Sameer N. Yacoub
Associated Press

BAGHDAD — Protesters clashed Friday with Iraqi police trying to prevent them from reaching the most venerated Sunni mosque in Baghdad, as members of their sect once again massed for anti-government rallies in several Iraqi cities.

Iraqi security forces had prevented worshippers from holding Friday prayers at the Abu Hanifa mosque last week as well, a development that reflects heightened sectarian tensions nearly a decade after the U.S. invasion of Iraq. The security forces worried that Friday prayers at this mosque might turn into a massive anti-government demonstration.

Police officials said anti-riot police used batons and water hoses to prevent worshippers from crossing a bridge leading to the mosque, which is located in the primarily Sunni neighborhood of Azamiyah.

The officials said five worshippers sustained bruises and minor injuries in the skirmishes at the bridge, about 1.24 miles from Abu Hanifa. They spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to talk to news media.

Abdul-Rahman al-Azzawi was among a group of people who tried to cross the 14th of Ramadan bridge when they were met by security forces.

“We were showered with water, and the policemen started to beat us. I do not know the reason behind this savage attack. We were only going to a mosque, not to al-Maliki’s office in the Green Zone,” he said, referring to Iraqi Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki’s office in the heavily secured quarter in the center of Baghdad nowhere close to the mosque.

The clashes did not reach the Abu Hanifa mosque itself. The area around the holy site was calm, and hundreds of people, including Sunni parliament Speaker Osama al-Nujaifi, attended the Friday prayers there.

During the Friday sermon in the mosque, Sunni cleric Ahmed Haasan al-Taha criticized the restriction of movement imposed on worshippers.

“Several days ago, the authorities promised us that they would provide the people free access to Abu Hanifa, but once again the government officials failed to live to their promises,” al-Taha said.

In the western province of Anbar, the heart of the protest movement that began in December, masked men arrived at the site of demonstrations in Fallujah, raising the flag used by predominantly Sunni rebels in neighboring Syria.

Rebel chief aims for glory in Syria

By Zeina Karam
Associated Press

BEIRUT — The chief of Syria’s main, Western-backed rebel group marked the second anniversary of the start of the uprising against President Bashar Assad on Friday by pledging to fight until the “criminal” regime is gone.

Gen. Salim Idris, the head of the Supreme Military Council, called on Syrian soldiers to join the rebels in a “fight for freedom and democracy,” and said: “Dear friends, the Free Syrian Army (fighters) will not give up.”

In Damascus, authorities beefed up security measures as rebel groups called for stepped-up attacks on government troops and state institutions on the anniversary.

The revolt against Assad’s authoritarian rule began in March 2011, with protests in the southern city of Daraa, after troops arrested teenagers who scrawled anti-regime graffiti on a wall. It has since morphed into a civil war that has killed an estimated 70,000 people, according to the U.N.

“We want (a) Syria where every Syrian can live in peace and liberty. This is our dream. This is what we are fighting for,” Idris said in a video address from the military council’s media office.

He spoke in an undisclosed location in northern Syria that is under rebel control. “I know our battle is not so easy. We have to fight against planes, tanks and huge missiles,” Idris said.

JPMorgan’s Dimon accused of withholding data

By Marcy Gordon
Associated Press

WASHINGTON—JPMorgan Chase CEO Jamie Dimon held back showing federal regulators reports in May that revealed the bank had accumulated billions of dollars in trading losses, according to congressional testimony Friday from the firm’s former chief financial officer.

Douglas Braunstein, now a vice chairman at the bank, told the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations that Dimon did not submit the daily reports for two weeks because he was concerned about “confidentiality.”

Dimon ultimately acknowledged later that month that the firm had lost $2 billion on risky trades out of its London office. The losses have since been revised to more than $6 billion.

The Senate hearing was held a day after the subcommittee issued a scathing report that ascribed widespread blame for losses to key executives at the firm. The report said that the executives ignored growing risks and hid losses from investors and federal regulators.

After reading the report and hearing executives testify that they didn’t know who was responsible for informing regulators, members of the panel questioned whether the nation’s biggest bank had become too large to manage.

The “culture at JPMorgan ... piled on risk, hid losses, disregarded risk limits, manipulated risk models, dodged oversight and misinformed the public,” Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., subcommittee’s chairman, said Friday.

On Thursday, JPMorgan acknowledged it made mistakes but rejected any assertions that it concealed losses or risks. A spokesman declined to comment directly on the accusation that Dimon knew of the trading loss in April.

Dimon was not a witness at Friday’s hearing.

In April, news reports said a trader in JPMorgan’s London office known as “the whale” had taken huge risks that were roiling the markets. Dimon immediately dismissed the reports as a “tempest in a teapot” during a conference call with analysts.

But Dimon acknowledged the losses a month later. And he told a separate Senate committee in June that the bank showed “bad judgment,” was “stupid” and “took far too much risk.”

The hearing featured testimony from Braunstein and Ina Drew, who was the firm’s chief investment officer overseeing trading strategy at the time of the losses.

Both were asked about information that bank executives gave to federal examiners in April that significantly understated losses for the first quarter of 2012. The numbers they gave the regulators were well below what was known inside the bank, said Levin.

Ford CEO’s pay falls sharply to $20.95 million in 2012

The Associated Press

DEARBORN, Mich. — Ford Motor Co. CEO Alan Mulally’s compensation fell 29 percent to $20.95 million in 2012 as the company’s board weighed record North American profits and quality improvements against heavy losses in Europe and lower market share in the U.S. and elsewhere.

Ford reported Mulally’s compensation Friday in its annual proxy filing with the federal government.

Mulally earned $2 million in salary, the same as he earned in 2011. But his bonus fell 27 percent to $1.3 million and his stock awards dropped by half to $6.8 million.

He received $7.5 million in stock options, the same as in 2011. His bonus under Ford’s incentive bonus plan for executives fell 28 percent to $2.6 million.

Mulally also received $680,809 in other compensation, including the use of a private airplane, housing expenses and security. That was up slightly from 2011.

Ford reported a record $8 billion pretax profit in North America in 2012, as its sales rose and it made more money per vehicle.

Tough winter forces owls south in hunt for food

■ Minnesota center treats ailing raptors

By Steve Karnowski
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — It's been a tough winter for owls in parts of North America, and the evidence is turning up on roadsides, at bird feeders and at a wildlife rehabilitation center in Minnesota.

The dead, injured and sick owls are symptoms of what ornithologists call an "irruption," a natural, cyclical phenomenon that happens when hungry owls that normally winter in northern Canada head south in search of food — either because their normal food of mice, voles and lemmings are in short supply or heavy snow cover makes it difficult to hunt for small rodents. Other irruptions have been reported recently in New England, as well as southern Ontario and Quebec, and parts of British Columbia.

JIM MONE / ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gail Buhl holds Boreas, an injured boreal owl, on Wednesday at the Raptor Center on the St. Paul campus of the University of Minnesota. The center listed about 30 owls as patients this week. It has been a tough winter for owls in some parts of North America.

This year it happens to be northern Minnesota that's seeing much of the action and it's mostly tiny boreal owls.

"They're excruciatingly cute," said Geoff LeBaron, director of the Christmas Bird Count program at the National Audubon Society.

As the owls flock to Minnesota, so do bird watchers. The prime owl habitat of the Sax-Zim Bog is about 45 miles northwest of Duluth, and it has an annual birding festival in February.

Frank Nicoletti, director of banding at the Hawk Ridge Bird Observatory in Duluth, said he's been guiding owl watchers non-stop for the last couple of months.

They've been traveling to northern Minnesota from all over for the chance to spot visiting boreal owls, which are normally tough to see because of their size, and because they don't usually come out during daylight. They also sit very still when they perch.

Boreas, an injured boreal owl, is a patient at the Raptor Center on the St. Paul campus of the University of Minnesota.

Irruptions tend to involve young owls because older owls are more experienced hunters and know their territories better and so are better at finding food. Younger northern owls also don't know about dangers from humans — like cars — so they're more likely to end up as roadkill. They're often weak by the time they make it south, and some species might not recognize the local small mammals as food.

Nicoletti picked up three dead boreal owls on Tuesday alone, and evidence is also turning up at the Raptor Center on the St. Paul campus of the University of Minnesota.

It was treating about 30 owls out of some 58 avian patients this week. With the help of volunteers to hold the birds still, veterinary technicians on Wednesday checked the wings, ears, eyes and weights of sick and injured owls as they tried to nurse them back to health.

Distracted driving seen as more of problem in U.S. than in Europe

Joan Lowy
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Distracted driving is more widespread in the U.S. than in Europe, according to a study released Thursday that surveyed drivers about their cellphone and texting habits.

More U.S. drivers reported talking on their cellphones behind the wheel than their counterparts in seven European countries, the study by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention found. Nearly 69 percent of U.S. drivers said they had talked on a cellphone while driving within the previous 30 days. The share of European drivers who said they chatted on their phones ranged from 21 percent in the United Kingdom to 59 percent in Portugal.

A larger share of U.S. drivers also reported reading or sending text or email messages while driving. Only Portugal's drivers matched those in the U.S. for this distracting habit — 31 percent in both countries. Spain had the smallest share of drivers who said they texted or emailed, at 15 percent.

The study was based on online surveys of drivers ages 18 to 64 in the U.S., Belgium, France, Germany, the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, and the United Kingdom in 2011.

Researchers offered no explanation for why the use of distracting mobile devices is more common in the U.S. than other countries. Mobile device markets in the U.S. and Europe are similarly saturated, making it unlikely that the findings are attributable to differing portions of the population owning devices in the countries, the study said.

It's also unlikely that differences in local laws can fully explain why more U.S. drivers than European drivers say they use their phones, the study said. Nearly all European countries banned hand-held cellphone use by drivers, yet there was a large variation in the share of drivers reporting the use of cellphones in the seven EU countries surveyed.

"We can't really say why a greater percentage of drivers in the U.S. appear to be engaging in these behaviors. We really don't know," the study's author, CDC epidemiologist Rebecca Naumann, said. "We certainly know it's an area that deserves more research."

WHAT DOES THE BIBLE SAY:

By Gary Puryear

“HOW’S YOUR MATH”

“You must be careful to do everything I command you. Don’t add anything to the things I tell you, and don’t take anything away” (Deuteronomy 12:32 ERV). Although we no longer live by the commands of the Old Testament (Hebrews 7:22; 8:13; 9:15-17; Romans 7:4; Colossians 2:14-16), the principle of not adding or taking away from God’s law still stands. The existence of denominations indicates that some have either added to or taken from the teachings of the New Testament. A strict adherence to the New Testament results in “ONE” (Ephesians 4:4-6) body, Spirit, hope, Lord, faith, baptism, God and Father. Have you ever heard anyone say, “I believe in God and I know Jesus but I just don’t see why it is necessary to follow the instructions in the Bible”? “For this is the love of God, that we keep His commandments: and his commandments are not grievous (hard)” (1 John 5:3). Earlier Jesus had said “If ye love me, keep my commandments” (John 14:15). The New Testament closes with the words found in (Revelation 22:18-21). Among those closing admonitions are these words, “If any man shall add unto these things... If any man shall take away from the words of this prophecy...” (Vss. 17-18). It is no small matter when we neglect to obey God. I constantly see and hear of things done in the name of religion that have no authority from heaven. Some are adding and some are subtracting-simple math with serious consequences?

Webster County sets community meeting

GOP senator shifts on gay marriage

Gleaner staff

A community dinner meeting is scheduled in Webster County later this month to discuss the process for the community to become certified by the state as a Work Ready Community.

The certification indicates that a community and its workforce have achieved certain standards for educational attainment, community commitment, broadband availability and other factors that could make them attractive to employers.

Henderson County has already earned the Work Ready Community status while Union County has been designated a Work Ready Community in Progress.

Webster County is in the process of applying for certification.

The community meeting will begin at 6 p.m. Tuesday, March 26, with a light dinner in the media center at Webster County High School.

Reservations should be made by Monday, March 25, by contacting Betsy Wells-Jones, the coordinator of education and workforce development for Northwest Kentucky Forward at (270) 826-7505 or betsy@northwestky.com, or Webster County High School Principal Tim Roy at tim.roy@webster.kyschools.us or (270) 639-5092.

WASHINGTON — A Republican senator’s embrace of gay marriage is the latest sign of soul-searching in a party struggling to adapt in a society whose demographics — and views on emotional issues — are changing fast.

Gay marriage still divides the party, with the conservative wing strongly opposed. But an increasing number of Republicans, now including Sen. Rob Portman of Ohio, are reversing course. Many others simply downplay the subject.

With the issue of immigration also shifting rapidly under Republicans’ feet, they seem increasingly focused — and united — on one overarching goal: keeping income taxes from rising. Their solidarity on that issue is hindering President Barack Obama’s efforts to make higher tax revenue part of a compromise approach to deficit spending and expensive social programs.

These trends raise the possibility that the GOP — reeling after losing the popular vote in five of the last six presidential elections — will lessen its identity with hot-button social issues and sharpen its emphasis on tax and spending matters.

Portman announced Friday that he now supports gay marriage, linking his stand to learning that one of his sons is gay.

A former U.S. trade representative and White House budget chief, Portman is seen as one of the party’s most knowledgeable and effective leaders. Mitt Romney considered him to be his running mate last year. Portman says he told Romney of his son Will’s sexuality but does not believe it affected Romney’s decision.

As a U.S. House member in 1996, Portman supported the Defense of Marriage Act, or DOMA. It defines marriage as between a man and a woman and bars federal recognition of same-sex marriage.

Portman’s reversal makes him the only Senate Republican to openly back gay marriage.

“I have come to believe that if two people are prepared to make a lifetime commitment to love and care for each other in good times and in bad, the government shouldn’t deny them the opportunity to get married,” Portman wrote in an op-ed article in The Columbus Dispatch.

He said he had talked to his pastor and others, including Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., who opposes gay marriage, and to former Vice President Dick Cheney, who supports it.

Cheney, whose younger daughter is a lesbian, became arguably the best-known Republican to embrace gay marriage with his announcement in June 2009.

Portman said his previous views on marriage were rooted in his Methodist faith.

TRAINING from 1A and 30-hour OSHA training classes next month that are needed by area industries.

While OSHA classes are provided in a variety of locations, “$695 was the lowest I could find,” Redding said. The consortium, though, will offer the 10-hour class for $300 and the 30-hour class for $500.

“This way, it’s here, it’s local (and) you can go home at night,” she said during a Henderson Chamber of Commerce Brown Bag series presentation last week.

A variety of employers could benefit from a class that will be offered this Tuesday to help adjust to the class of cultures and values when multiple generations — Baby boomers, GenXers and Millennials — are part of a single workforce, Redding said.

And business owners can learn how to use social media tools to promote their small business through social media tools such as Facebook, Pinterest and Hootsuite. “It’s not just a social thing,” Redding said.

Two social media business classes will be offered at United Community Bank of West Kentucky in Morganfield next Thursday.

An eight-week conversational Spanish course proved so popular among employers who increasingly are hiring Latino workers that the participants asked for it to be extended, she said.

In its most ambitious undertaking, the consortium is planning a program tentatively called “Job Skills Boot Camp,” with classes taught for four hours a day over two weeks.

Topics could include customer service, basic math and Excel, paying taxes, preventive health care — even money management to help workers manage their paychecks better and avoid scenarios where lacking emergency funds to make a car repair, or having their vehicle repossessed for loan nonpayment, could prevent them from getting to work.

“You can teach how to operate a machine,” Redding said. “But can you teach how to show up on time?”

Consortium Chairman Mike Shappell, the operations manager at the Sunspring America plant here, said employers are mystified when job applicants boast that they “only missed (work) 10 or 12 times last year.”

“You’ve got to get across to them that missing once a month is not great,” Henderson Chamber President Brad Schneider said.

One possibility is to offer the two-week “Boot Camp” class to job applicants or prospective employees with the understanding that if they have perfect attendance and complete the coursework satisfactorily, they will be granted a job interview, access to a special job fair or employment.

The consortium would also like to help educate job applicants about what to do, and not do, during an interview — and to not repeat the scene that Redding said she witnessed in which a woman showed up at a workplace “in hoochie-mama shorts and fuzzy slippers to hand in an application.”

The consortium, which has applied for not-for-profit status, was relaunched through the initiative of Northwest Kentucky Forward, the Henderson Chamber, Henderson Community College and others. It’s housed with Northwest Kentucky Forward on the fifth floor of the Soaper Building at Second and Main streets in downtown Henderson, where it has access to a 25- to 50-seat training room.

The restart was helped by Workforce Investment Board grant last year that paid Redding’s first-year salary; $261,000 in Webster County coal severance tax dollars that includes $50,000 for the training consortium to provide free training to Webster County residents and workers; and a $26,915 Bluegrass Status Skills Corp. grant to subsidize a variety of classes — including Dale Carnegie training — if three or more local companies send workers to attend.

Discounts are offered to companies that become members, with yearly dues as follows:

- 1-50 employees: $150
- 51-150 employees: $200
- 151-200 employees: $250
- $251 or more employees: $350

PHOENIX — Debra Milke was once one of the most reviled mothers around, convicted of dressing her 4-year-old son in his favorite outfit and sending him off to visit a mall Santa Claus with two men who shot the boy execution-style in the Arizona desert.

Milke said she had nothing to do with Christopher’s death, but a detective testified at her 1990 trial that she had confessed to him — and him alone — in a closed interrogation room. Prosecutors said she had her son killed to collect on a $5,000 insurance policy.

$10 entry fee. The names of those walking the dogs will be placed in a drawing. If the person’s name is drawn, then BYGA will use a portion of the fees to donate in that person’s name to any local nonprofit animal rescue group who participate in the parade. It will be the person’s choice which nonprofit agency receives a portion of the proceeds, Butler said.

“We hope to include motorcyclists, old cars and tractors,” he said, adding that there will be drawings and donations made in these categories as well.

Businesses donating between $25 and $100 will also find their name in a pot, Butler said. The business donating more than $100 will get their name entered twice. The business that wins the drawing will get to decide which nonprofit agency will get a portion of the proceeds donated by the businesses. Butler said only those nonprofit agencies participating in the parade can be chosen to receive the funds.

Finally, the parade will be capped off by a free meal in Central Park, decide if they have enough evidence to retry Milke. The ruling doesn’t toss out the supposed confession. It just allows defense lawyers to have all of the detective’s police files.

The ruling has raised questions about other cases in which the now-retired Saldate gave testimony.

The court noted four cases where judges threw out confessions or indictments because Saldate lied under oath and four instances where cases were tossed or confessions excluded because Saldate violated the suspect’s constitutional rights.

Butler said. People are welcome to come and eat as long as the food lasts, he said.

Those interested in participating in the parade should contact BYGA no later than March 31. People can write to Lawrence Butler, Diane Butler or Dorothy Black at P.O. Box 1836, Henderson KY 42419 or call 316-5536. Interested people can also send an email to lbl@apex.net.

A sea of hands go up as Heather Hill, with the Kentucky Derby Museum, asks for a volunteer from a group of East Heights students. The visit is part of a outreach program that uses activities at the track as a vehicle to teach math and science.

“also enforces educational concepts they are getting in the classroom in a fun way,” and the program fit the bill.

Hill’s favorite lesson to present is “Economics and the Derby,” which is geared toward fifth-grade students. As part of that, Ellie Kellen pretended she was a hotel manager and had to figure out prices she would offer for each room.

“I learned that you have an opportunity cost to make decisions on how you can decide on what you want and buy,” Kellen said.

Using a “Price is Right” type game, Hill explained to the fifth-graders how six different industries bring in an estimated $400 million to Kentucky each year.

“All the money is taxed, so it goes back to build schools and roads and things like that,” she said. “It affects all residents.”

Hill also made a point to share with students how the Derby relates to their lives. The lessons were math- and science-based for the most part, but all tied back to the Derby theme.

Third-grader Hannah

Martin attended the “Mathin’ Around the Track” lesson, learning about dividing fractions. She was not stumped when Hill asked where the Kentucky Derby takes place. Martin said she’s been to Churchill Downs twice to attend the derby.

Not all kids know about the Derby at the school.

“This is a fun way to introduce them,” said Walker.

retirees and their dependents,” Patriot president and chief executive officer Bennett K. Hatfield said in a statement. “Our labor and retiree benefit costs have risen to levels that simply cannot be sustained given the challenges facing the company and our industry.”

Separately on Thursday, Patriot filed suit against its former parent company, Peabody Energy Corp., also of St. Louis, saying it wants to ensure that Peabody doesn’t try to use Patriot’s bankruptcy “to escape Peabody’s own health care obligations to certain retirees.”

Union leaders have been anticipating the effort to cut retiree benefits, holding protests in St. Louis last month that drew more than 1,000 people. UMW President Cecil Roberts called the proposal “unacceptable” and said the loss of benefits would cause financial ruin and threaten the health of thousands of retirees.

“This is the path we have been saying Patriot would take from the very beginning of this bankruptcy last July,” Roberts said in a statement. “They’re demanding massive changes to the collective bargaining agreement, and they want to scrap the health care benefits our retirees earned through decades of blood and toil.”

Patriot said it cannot afford to continue paying higher wages to its 1,600 union workers than its 1,300 nonunion miners.

Patriot said its payments for UMW-related retiree health care amounts to about $1.6 billion. Patriot proposed transferring retiree health liabilities to a voluntary employee beneficiary association trust. Patriot would make an initial contribution of $15 million to the trust.

Patriot spun off from Peabody in 2007, with Peabody agreeing to pay health care costs for more than 3,000 UMW retirees who were employed by Peabody entities that were transferred to Patriot.

Peabody has said it might seek an end to liabilities to Patriot employees if Patriot sought a modification to health benefits.

In response to the lawsuit, Peabody said in a statement Thursday that Patriot “is taking the untenable position that our payments should continue in full in the future, even if Patriot’s expenses are reduced.”

The union previously filed suit against Peabody and Arch Coal in West Virginia, claiming they set up Patriot to fail so that pension and health care benefits could be shed. After the 2007 spinoff, Patriot acquired mines that Arch Coal spun off into Magnum Coal. Arch Coal is also based in St. Louis.

Union leaders said at the February protests that the benefit cuts would affect retired miners and dependents mostly in West Virginia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky and Ohio. At least twice, a handful of protesters were arrested for sitting in the street outside Peabody’s downtown office building.

■ UK's NCAA hopes absorb a serious dent in 64-48 loss

By Teresa M. Walker
Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Kevin Stallings made his Vanderbilt Commodores go to class Friday. Then they hit the court Friday and put together their best game this season.

And they put a serious dent in Kentucky's hopes of having at least a chance to defend its national title in the process.

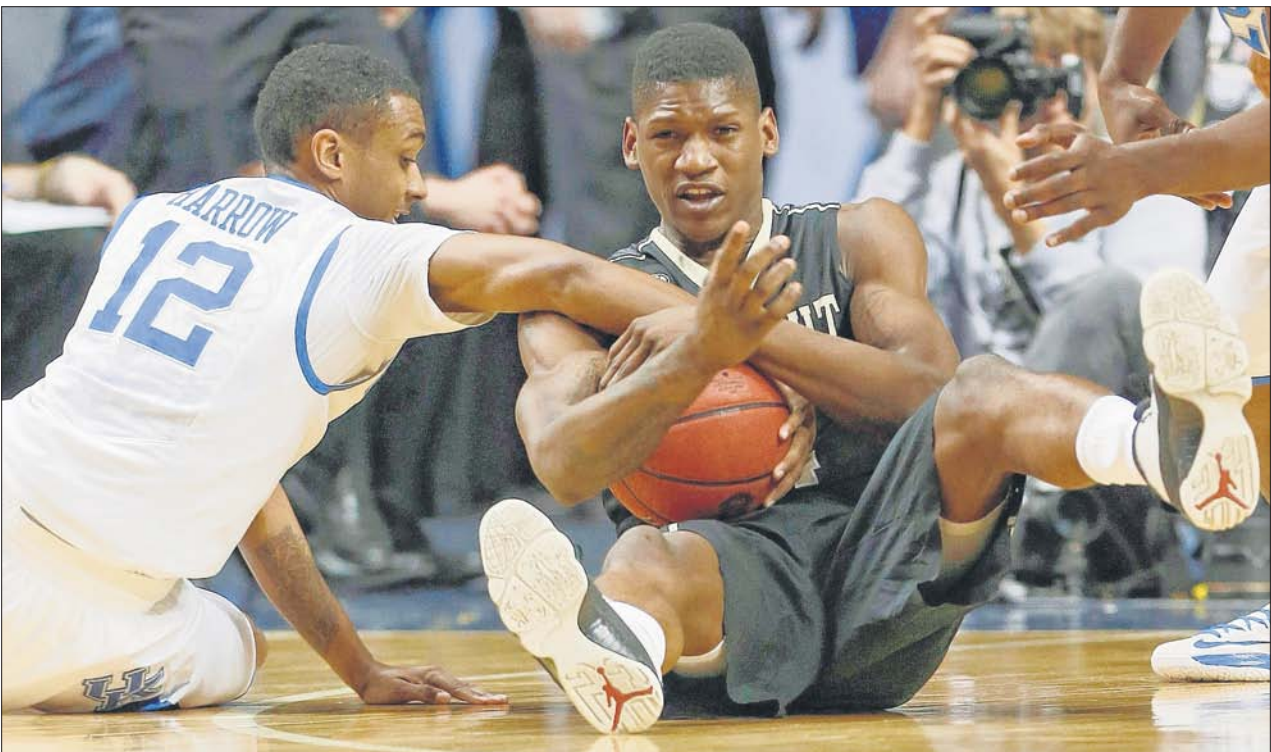

Dai-Jon Parker scored 12 points, and Vanderbilt beat Kentucky 64-48 Friday night in a rematch of last year's Southeastern Conference tournament championship game won by the Commodores.

"It's been a long time since I've been as proud of a team as I am this team here," Stallings said. "I'm very proud of this team and very proud of this season, and we're 16-16. That's the first time we've been .500 in about five months. But you know what? I wish it was better than that, but very proud of them."

Actually, Vandy was 6-6 at the start of SEC play before losing to Kentucky. Now the 10th-seeded Commodores have won six of their last seven in giving Stallings his 400th career victory, and they will play either Missouri or Mississippi in their fourth straight semifinal on Saturday.

"Each day the games get more fun," Vandy junior Rod Odom said. "I'm sure it'll be a great opportunity and a great experience for us tomorrow."

possibly as a play-in candidate after coach John Calipari sent six players to the NBA last summer and tried reloading yet again with another top recruiting class. But Nerlens Noel had surgery earlier this week to fix his torn ACL, and the Wildcats couldn't match the intensity of the Commodores.

Calipari said his Wildcats "laid an egg," while Vandy played well.

"The good news is everyone seems to be losing," Calipari said. "I just hope we're the best of the bad right now. That's what I'm hoping."

Now the Wildcats will have to wait until Sunday's selection show just like so many other teams hoping they did enough to earn one of the 68 NCAA tournament berths. Calipari said they didn't take care of business when they had an opportunity to take the decision out of someone else's hands.

Kentucky forward

Willie Cauley-Stein pointed out the three wins over ranked teams, including Missouri.

"And Missouri is in it," Cauley-Stein said. "I don't see why we can't compete in it neither. It's just a matter of getting our stuff together."

Kevin Bright scored 11 points, Kedren Johnson and Kyle Fuller had 10 apiece. Vanderbilt (16-16) shot 50 percent overall, hitting 8 of 17 3-pointers.

Archie Goodwin led Kentucky with 12 points, and Kyle Wiltjer had 10. Ryan Harrow was 2 of 15 for four points as Kentucky was held to a season-low in points. The Wildcats outrebounded Vandy 32-30 but just couldn't keep up with how well the Commodores shot the ball.

"We gave them a lot of open 3s, and we gave them a lot of easy lanes to the basket," Goodwin said.

Harrow sat in the locker room with a towel on top of his head upset at his play.

"I got shots that I wanted to get, and I just was missing them," Harrow said. "I just apologize. It's my fault. I apologized to my team."

The Commodores also lost their top six players off the team that won the school's first tourney title in 61 years with three also in the NBA. Their growing pains have been such that winning is the only way to keep playing, and now they improved to 5-4 in this tourney against Kentucky.

They came out and hit 18 of their first 27 shots, including their first five of the second half, in building a 48-27 lead. Kentucky clawed back with 10 straight points, the last a high-flying dunk by Goodwin to pull within 48-37 with 12:43 to go. Then the Wildcats went cold, not hitting another field goal until Alex Poythress' layup with 7:31 remaining made it 53-41 because Vandy suddenly couldn't hit after a Kevin Bright 3-pointer with 11:22 left.

Johnson hit two free throws followed by a 3-pointer from Sheldon Jeter to push the lead back to 17 with 6:00 left, and Kentucky didn't threaten again. Stallings was able to pull his starters in the final minute for an ovation, and the Dores finally could hear their much smaller group of fans with the Kentucky supporters stunned into silence.

"It was really fun to like hear that crowd, hear all those people like not say a word," Fuller said. "All you could hear was our Vandy fans, and it was great to be there. It was great to feel."

Kentucky swept Vanderbilt in the regular season, but the Wildcats won both games by a combined six points. The Commodores weren't happy about a 60-58 loss Jan. 10 at Memorial Gym where officials missed a late shot clock violation on a key bucket by Noel.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Erik Murphy scored a career-high 27 points and grabbed a career-best 12 rebounds to help the 13th-ranked Florida Gators take the first step Friday toward trying to add a Southeastern Conference tournament title to their regular season championship by beating LSU 80-58.

SEC Commissioner Mike Slive presented Florida coach Billy Donovan with the regular season trophy before tipoff. Then the Gators (25-6) started working toward their first tournament title since 2007 when they wrapped up a three-peat. They will play Alabama in the semifinals Saturday.

Charles Carmouche led the Tigers with 14 points.

Florida dominated LSU with a 47-27 edge on the boards and easily outshot the Tigers as the Gators hit better from 3-point range (11 of 20, 55 percent) than they did overall (29 of 57, 50.9 percent). LSU shot 33.3 percent (18 of 54).

Cols' Chandler Marshall signs to play tennis for Cumberlands

Somewhat of a latecomer to the sport of tennis, Chandler Marshall will get the opportunity to play college tennis for the program once coached by his grandfather.

Marshall, who became more serious about the sport after quitting basketball, signed with the University of the Cumberlands on Friday.

"I started playing when I was in sixth grade," said Marshall, who has been on the Henderson County High School team since his freshman year. But it wasn't until he gave up basketball that he thought playing tennis in college was more of a possibility.

"I would consider him a diamond in the rough. He played other sports prior to committing to tennis. His upside is very good with his athletic base in basketball primarily," said Chin Tan, who is in his 25th season as the tennis coach at the in 1970 and 1971 when he was a teacher there.

Marshall's grandfather, Ted Clark, also briefly coached tennis at the Williamsburg, Ky., school

"We have a vested interest in welcoming home one of our very own," Tan said.

"I wasn't really a coach. The players knew more than I did," said Clark, who found it more of a coincidence than a connection that led his grandson back to the school in the mountains of southeastern Kentucky. "I hadn't been back there in 40 years."

Marshall, who is playing at No. 3 singles this season, posted a 13-1 regular-season record for the Colonels last season.

"(Coach Tan) will be good for me in developing my tennis game," said Marshall, who plans to major in business and marketing.

"It's a good fit because it's a small school. I'm used to a small school because I went to Holy Name before high school."

U.S. is ousted by Puerto Rico

MIAMI – Once again, the United States could only watch as an opposing pitcher celebrated at the World Baseball Classic. This time it was 38-year-old right-hander Nelson Figueroa, who became the pride of Puerto Rico on Friday night when he led his team into the semifinals and eliminated the Americans, 4-3. After Figueroa threw his last pitch to end the sixth inning, he leaped off the mound with a hoot like a kid at recess, then ran to catcher Yadier Molina to share a hug. On Thursday, demonstrative Dominicans dominated the All-Star-laden U.S. lineup. The Americans endured a scoreless streak of 14 innings spanning the two defeats, and Figueroa limited them to two singles in six shutout innings.

Heat top Bucks for 21st in row

MILWAUKEE – LeBron James and Chris Bosh each scored 28 points, and the Miami Heat made it 21 straight wins, beating the Milwaukee Bucks 107-94 on Friday night. Only three other teams have won 20 in a row in one season, and the Heat now trail just the 1971-72 Los Angeles Lakers (33) and the 2007-08 Houston Rockets (22) after moving ahead of the 1970-71 Bucks. They withstood an early scare when Dwyane Wade walked to the locker room with a neck strain after crashing to the court. Miami led by as much as 17 in the third quarter, then withstood a push by the Bucks to remain unbeaten since a loss at Indiana on Feb. 1.

Chan captures third World title

LONDON, Ontario – While Patrick Chan won his third title at the World Figure Skating Championships on Friday night, there was no doubt Denis Ten won the title. The little-known skater from Kazakhstan stole Chan's spotlight — no easy thing to do in Canada — with a beautifully breezy and technically impressive performance to “The Artist” that surely would have won Uggie's approval. Ten won the free skate, but he couldn't overcome the lead Chan had after the short program. Earlier Friday, Tatiana Volosozhar and Makim Trankov won the pairs title, Russia's first since 2005.

Djokovic eases into semifinals

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. – Top-ranked Novak Djokovic advanced to the semifinals of the BNP Paribas Open with a 6-3, 6-1 victory over Jo-Wilfried Tsonga in 54 minutes on Friday. Juan Martin del Potro had to go the distance to upset No. 3 seed Andy Murray 6-7 (5), 6-3, 6-1 for the first time in five tries on hard courts and will play Djokovic next. The Argentine has lost to Djokovic eight times in 10 meetings. Djokovic extended his winning streak to 22 matches dating to Oct. 31, when he last lost to American Sam Querrey in Paris.

Zeller leads Hoosiers past Illini

■ He scores 24 as IU reaches the semifinals in the Big Ten

Wire reports

Cody Zeller scored 24 points and grabbed nine rebounds to lead No. 3 Indiana past Illinois 80-64 Friday in the Big Ten quarterfinals. The top-seeded Hoosiers (27-5) are off to a good start after claiming their first outright conference title in two decades and earning a first-round bye. They took control midway through the first half and withstood a mild push in the second, avenging a two-point loss at Illinois (22-12) last month. That set up a matchup with Wisconsin in Saturday's semifinals. Zeller had another big game after scoring a season-high 25 in a win at Michigan. He was 9 of 11 from the field and hit all six free throws. Victor Oladipo added 12 points and 11 rebounds and drew the loudest cheers with a 360-degree fast-break dunk with 90 seconds left. The Big Ten's Defensive Player of the Year, he also helped contain Brandon Paul. ■ Wisconsin 68, Michigan 59: Ben Brust scored 11 of his 14 points in the second half and No. 22 Wisconsin knocked off sixth-ranked Michigan 68-59 in the second round of the Big Ten tournament on Friday. Delay forces Broncos to cut Elvis Dumervil

Wire reports

Time really is money. Nobody knows that better than Elvis Dumervil and the Denver Broncos. Dumervil found himself out of a job and the Broncos were without their best defensive end Friday afternoon after they reached an agreement on a new contract, but saw it all come undone when tardy filing of the paperwork forced Denver to release him. A person familiar with the negotiations gave The Associated Press details about the confusion. The person did not want to be identified because the negotiations were not public.

Dumervil, a former Louisville star, is now a free agent, dumped late onto a market where one top defensive end, Cliff Avril, just signed a two-year deal with Seattle worth an average of $7.5 million a year. The Broncos now can start looking at other defensive ends, including Dwight Freeney, in what appears to be a buyer's market for pass rushers. ■ The Arizona Cardinals have released Kevin Kolb, ending the quarterback's two injury-filled seasons with the team. The team's move on Friday came just ahead of the deadline for paying Kolb a $2 million roster bonus.

The team paid Kolb some $20 million over two seasons after acquiring him in a trade that sent a second-round draft pick and cornerback Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie to the Philadelphia Eagles. Meanwhile, the Cardinals agreed to terms Friday on one-year contracts with former San Diego cornerback Antoine Cason and ex-Oakland defensive end Matt Shaughnessy. ■ The Minnesota Vikings have agreed to terms on a deal to land free agent receiver Greg Jennings from their rivals in Green Bay, according to a person with knowledge of the deal.

Jennings gives Minnesota the No. 1 receiver third-year quarterback Christian Ponder has desperately needed. The person requested anonymity because the deal had not been officially announced. Jennings caught 36 passes for 366 yards and four touchdowns in eight games last season. ■ The San Diego Chargers have agreed to a two-year contract with former New England Patriots running back Danny Woodhead. Woodhead is expected to complement Ryan Mathews, who's been plagued with injuries and a fumbling problem.

Woodhead was New England's second-leading rusher with 301 yards and four touchdowns on 76 carries while catching 40 passes for 446 yards and three scores. ■ The Indianapolis Colts have released safety Tom Zbikowski after one season with the team. The Notre Dame alum and professional boxer followed coach Chuck Pagano and teammates Brandon McKinney and Cory Redding from Baltimore to Indy last season. He started 11 games, finishing with 47 tackles, one sack and one interception while returning six kick-offs for 123 yards.

Adam Scott in the mix with 66 at Tampa Bay

Wire reports

Adam Scott had a breakthrough with his short game this winter, and it's so good now that he hardly even has to use it. Scott had a putt for birdie on 16 holes in a second round at the Tampa Bay Championship that was without a bogey and without much stress. He wound up with a 5-under 66 that left him one shot behind 31-year-old rookie Shawn Stefani. Stefani had to scramble more that he would have preferred, though he converted all the putts he felt he was supposed to make in his round of 70. Temperatures finally began to warm, and without much wind throughout the day, the tournament was wide open going into the weekend. Stefani was at 7-under 135, one shot ahead of Scott and past champion K.J. Choi, who had a 67. Twenty players were within five shots of the lead at the halfway point, a group that included everyone from Sergio Garcia and Matt Kuchar, to 19-year-old Jordan Spieth and Erik Compton, the two-time heart transplant recipient whose 65 was the low round of the day. It was the highest score to lead at Innisbrook in five years. Scott was right in the middle of it all, which is where he wants to be. The Australian hasn't shown too many scars from making bogeys on the last four holes to lose the British Open last summer. He finished the year by winning the Australian Masters. ■ Avantha Masters: Chapchai Nirat and Liang Wenchong each shot a 6-under 66 Friday to tie for the lead after the second round of the Avantha Masters, two strokes ahead of four others. ■ Thailand Open: Scott Strange took a one-stroke lead at the Thailand Open after a 7-under 65 Friday in the second round, which was suspended by darkness.

Kobe’s right, and NBA should’ve done more

ATLANTA — Kobe Bryant has had plenty of calls go his way during 16 years in the NBA, so it would be easy to dismiss his complaints in the ongoing debate about how he sprained his ankle. That would be a gross injustice.

Dohntay Jones’ play wasn’t just dangerous, it was downright dirty.

The Los Angeles Lakers all-star actually didn’t go far enough in griping about the play in Atlanta that left him with the worst sprained ankle of his career. The NBA also came up short in its response, merely putting out a statement on its Web site that acknowledged a foul should have been called on the Hawks player, but nothing more. Not even so much as a fine.

The league strangely failed to crack down on a very point it’s been emphasizing in recent years: When a player goes up, he must get a chance to come down.

Going forward, the NBA needs to do a better job defending Bryant, LeBron James and other high-profile players, because they’re the very reason we watch this game.

At the very least, Jones should’ve taken a hit in the wallet. A suspension of one or two games wouldn’t have been all that farfetched, either.

There’s no way a journeyman who’s on his sixth NBA team and stays in the league largely because of his defensive prowess should get away with a shady move that could potentially have such profound impact on the post-season. Come to think of it, no one should.

Bryant never got the chance to come down.

“That’s a very, very dangerous play,” he said. “Especially if I’m fading away, there’s no rhyme or reason why I should come down on somebody’s foot.”

Exactly.

While Bryant was receiving around-the-clock treatment in hopes of coming back ASAP (perhaps as soon as Friday night’s game at Indiana), it’s too early to tell if he’ll be the same player he was before Wednesday’s contest against the Hawks. You know, the guy who had literally taken an under-achieving Lakers team on his back and hoisted them to the final playoff spot in the Western Conference.

With the 34-year-old Bryant playing like he did a decade ago and Dwight Howard starting to get healthy for the first time all season, Los Angeles had a lethal 1-2 punch and a chance to move up another spot or two in the standings. Certainly, they had the look of an extremely dangerous team for whoever they drew in the opening round of the playoffs.

Now, who knows? Sprained ankles are a tricky thing. If Bryant comes back too soon, he’ll risk getting hurt again, perhaps even more seriously than before. If he doesn’t, or can’t play at the same level, the Lakers could miss the playoffs — and the NBA would have two of its biggest stars sitting at home.

All because Jones wound up underneath Bryant while defending a fade-away jumper that could’ve tied the game with 3 seconds remaining. The ball slid off the side of the rim and Bryant’s left foot came down on Jones’ right foot, twisting awkwardly. Kobe crumpled to the court, the Hawks got the rebound and Kyle Korver made two free throws to clinch a 96-92 victory that could have a huge impact on both teams’ seasons.

■ He throws six solid innings in St. Louis’ 5-1 win over Nationals

The Associated Press

JUPITER, Fla. — Adam Wainwright has no idea who the fan was that gave him that picture last week. He’d sure like to tell them thank you.

Wainwright limited Washington to one run in six strong innings in the St. Louis Cardinals’ 5-1 exhibition victory over the Nationals on Friday, his second consecutive impressive start since a fan helped him fix a mechanical flaw.

The right-hander was leaving the stadium following a rough start against the Nationals on March 2 when a group of fans handed him picture. He noticed his stride had shortened this spring and he extended it 6 inches for his next outing. In two starts since the change, he has allowed one earned run in 10 2-3 innings.

“It’s made a huge deal,” Wainwright said. “It gives my pitches more life. I’ve found that happy zone where I’m not extended too far where my ball flattens out but I’m a little bit closer to the plate now and I’m able to get on top of the ball so I’m getting better downhill plane. It really was an adjustment that helped in all aspects.”

Facing mostly Washington backups, Wainwright took a shutout into the sixth inning and allowed only three hits on the day manager Mike Matheny officially confirmed he’d start opening day April 1 in Arizona.

Jon Jay and Matt Adams homered in a four-run first inning for the Cardinals. Nationals starter Dan Haren rebounded from there, allowing just one earned run and two hits in the next four innings.

St. Louis Cardinals starting pitcher Adam Wainwright throws during the first inning of an exhibition baseball game against the Washington Nationals on Friday in Jupiter, Fla.

Haren, the right-hander who signed a one-year deal with the Nationals in the offseason, gave up five earned runs and six hits in five innings. He has a 5.79 ERA in four spring starts.

“That was just one of those days, man,” Haren said. “I felt like I was throwing a weighted ball out there. It was just bad all the way around. As I went along it was a little bit better, but my first couple starts were far and away better than this.

“I don’t know if it’s dead arm or I don’t even know what that is, I just didn’t feel great.”

Former pitcher Micah Owings had another solid day at the plate for Washington as he continues to try and make the switch from the mound to full-time position player. Owings, who will likely start the year at Triple-A, hit a grand slam Thursday and went 2 for 2 Friday. He’s hitting .429 (9-for-21).

The 30-year-old Owings is a career .283 hitter with nine home runs in 205 at-bats in six big league seasons.

“He’s had a great spring,” Nationals manager Davey Johnson said. “I’m really impressed by him...”

Matt Carpenter had two more hits for the Cardinals to improve his batting average to .417 this spring. He started at third base Friday but will see plenty of time at second base in the regular season.

Edward Mujica and Jason Motte both had scoreless innings out of the Cardinals’ bullpen. Both have struggled this spring, with Mujica posting a 15.00 ERA in six appearances coming in.

Wainwright allowed five runs and eight hits in three innings against the Nationals in his second start of the spring on March 2. But he lowered his ERA to 2.76 with another solid outing Friday.

Hamlin says he felt disrespected by NASCAR fine

By Jenna Fryer
Associated Press

BRISTOL, Tenn. — Denny Hamlin said Friday that he believes NASCAR was disrespectful by not contacting him before fining him $25,000 over critical comments about the new race car.

Hamlin said a bigger name would have at least gotten a courtesy call beforehand.

“That was the biggest complaint I had. If I was Jeff Gordon or Tony (Stewart), Dale (Earnhardt) Jr., or any Hendrick driver, they would have had a conversation before,” Hamlin said. “Just to slap the fine on me and not tell me anything is what really, really bugged me. A lot. That felt like I had not earned my place in this sport, and I’ve grinded it out here for eight years and I really feel like I’ve done what it takes to earn the respect of both my peers and NASCAR. I feel like had I been somebody else, the outcome may have been different.”

That’s what played into Hamlin’s anger last week when he stood firm in his refusal to pay the fine for criticizing the Gen-6 car following its second race of the season. He said he’d be suspended before he’d pay over a statement many considered mild made on pit road at Phoenix following a third-place run.

“I don’t want to be the pessimist, but it did not race as good as our generation five cars. This is more like what the generation five was at the beginning,” he said at Phoenix.

But NASCAR, which spent last year developing the car with heavy input from the manufacturers to improve the on-track product, has asked drivers to be careful in how they publicly talk about the car in an effort to build a strong public reception. The previous “Car of Tomorrow” was panned from the beginning, in part because the drivers picked it apart early.

Hamlin said after being fined he’d appeal the penalty, but announced Thursday on Twitter he would not drag his Joe Gibbs Racing team through the process.

■ Kyle Busch won his first career pole at Bristol Motor Speedway with a track record qualifying lap.

Busch turned a lap at 129.535 mph in his Joe Gibbs Racing Toyota to take the top starting spot for Sunday’s race.

It beat the record of 128.709 set by Ryan

Newman in 2003, which had been the first sub-15 second lap at Bristol.

Busch’s lap was 14.813 seconds, besting Newman’s lap of 14.908.

Kasey Kahne qualified second in a Chevrolet for Hendrick Motorsports with a lap at 128.995, and Busch’s teammate Denny Hamlin was third at 128.960. Brian Vickers was fourth in a Toyota for Michael Waltrip Racing and Paul Menard was fifth in a Richard Childress Racing Chevrolet.

Defending series champion Brad Keselowski was the highest qualifying Ford driver in seventh.

Baffert’s Super Ninety Nine leads Rebel field

The Associated Press

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. — Trainer Bob Baffert will try to win the $600,000 Rebel Stakes at Oaklawn Park for the fourth time in a row on Saturday.

Baffert has two horses entered, including the 3-2 morning-line favorite Super Ninety Nine, who won the Southwest Stakes last month by 11¼ lengths over a sloppy track.

Todd Pletcher-trained Delhomme is making his first start of the year and opened as the 7-2 second choice. D. Wayne Lukas is running two horses, with Oxbow opening at 4-1 and coming off a second-place finish in the Lecomte Stakes at the Fair Grounds.

The Rebel is a prep for the $1 million Arkansas Derby on April 13, and offers a total 85 qualifying points for the Kentucky Derby on May 4. The winner earns 50 points, with 20 for second, 10 for third and 5 for fourth.

The field should have a better track for the Rebel with the forecast calling for clear skies and temperatures in the high 70s.

Baffert-trained horses have won the last three Rebels and Super Ninety Nine is the heavy favorite for the 1 1/16-mile, Grade 2 race. Super Ninety Nine will again have Rafael Bejarano aboard, this time breaking from the far post in the 11-horse field.

Baffert is also sending out Den’s Legacy, owned by Joe and Scott Ford of Westrock Stables of Arkansas. Like Super Ninety Nine, Den’s Legacy is shipping in from California for the race. He’ll break from the No. 6 post under Robby Albarado.

Oxbow, at 4-1, will have Mike Smith aboard. Lukas is also running Will Take Charge, a 15-1 shot who won the Smarty Jones Stakes in January. Oxbow is in the 10 post.

“They came out of their works in good order,” Lukas said. “I spoke to Mike briefly last week. Of course, it doesn’t have to be a lot of conversation with a rider like him. I’m just going to put him on the horse and send him out there.”

Teen's partying lifestyle requires strong dose of parenting

Dear Amy: My oldest son is a junior in high school (almost 17). He has been a decent student, but we have had several issues since last summer regarding partying (drinking and smoking pot). As far as we know, he is pretty honest with us regarding what he does. As parents, we have had many lengthy discussions about why partying of any kind is not good at his age. We do not condone it. He tells us kids drink much more than he does. In fact, he says he really doesn't like beer but does like to smoke pot — not every day but on weekends with his friends. He knows our stance on the subject, but he told me today that he cannot wait to go to a party this week-end and smoke pot. We are at our wits' end. I appreciate his candor but fear that his behavior will catch up with him in a bad way. Is booting him out of the house the answer? I don't want to!

— Tired Mother

Dear Mother: It seems strange that you would ponder booting your son out of the house before you would consider having a conversation with him that involves more than sharing your “stance” on partying. Your treatment of this topic sounds like you are educating him on the risks of high cholesterol. The word “stance” implies standing. So stand up for yourself — and for him.

Protect him from his own lousy judgment (he is 16!) and convey to him that you expect much more from him than to simply be honest about his poor choices. You expect him not to make these choices. Smoking pot and drinking alcohol at 16 are still illegal in this country. This fact may actually compensate for some of your weak parenting, but have you emphasized this? You could try to turn the page by saying, “Actually, honey, you're not going to be smoking pot with your friends. And if you do, we will find you and drag you home. And if that doesn't work, we'll call the police if we have to.” Get a backbone. If you won't stand up for your own beliefs, how can you expect him to have the strength to do anything more than weakly manipulate you? Some parents resort to random drug testing their kids. While this may seem draconian, it can actually give kids an “out” when they're being tested by their peers. The experience of peeing in a cup might shock him into some awareness.

Horoscope

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (March 16). The next six weeks bring new partnerships, alliances and joint ventures. April is a pleasurable break from routine. May increases your determination. The progress of a project may be delayed in June, and this works in your favor. Lucrative bonuses come in April and July. A new relationship bond is formed in August. Taurus and Libra people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 39, 14, 32, 14 and 2.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Some of your psychic wounds, though they may not go deep, are still fresh enough to be tender to the touch. The one who is compelled to “touch” will help you discover this.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). The best dancers don't look at their feet to make sure they are doing it right. They just dance. Someone is likely to be capturing your performance on video or in memory, and you can always analyze later.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You respect the privacy of others, but you're still very curious about what goes on when you're not there. Intimacy is created in a delicate balance between respect and curiosity.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You have the kind of friend who shows you what community and friendship really mean. That's a person to celebrate and cherish when you get the chance this weekend.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You want “next level” access in this video game of life, and yet, like any game, you won't get there until you've taken the steps to gain the keys. Even the cheats can only help you if you're in the game.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You approach many aspects of life as an art, including love. Self-doubt is a normal part of artistic development that you may be experiencing, but keep going, and you'll regain your confidence.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Certain loved ones have earned your trust and plenty of freedom, which you gladly give. Be sure to stay involved, though. Your care and support are still needed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Often, people want to change another person instead of improving their own scene. You know better. Your efforts are best invested in self-development, and you'll take great joy in the process now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Share your talent. Because you have a wonderful eye and a gift for creative interpretation, you make people pay attention to the glorious details all around us.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). If you finish one short assignment today, it may be enough to make your whole weekend feel productive — provided the assignment is something you really wanted to do.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You'll have fun and let your social guard down, too, but don't let it fall too far. Open books look like a mess, and they don't fit neatly anywhere, either. Stay a little mysterious.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You have a healthy respect for yourself, but you don't often preen for hours in the mirror like a model getting ready for a magazine shoot. Today may be the exception, as you'll be in just the mood to get playful with your image.

Lip balm makes a real mess when sent through the laundry

Dear Heloise: Somehow I missed my husband's cherry lip balm when checking pockets before doing laundry. Needless to say, it got washed and dried with a large load of dark laundry. You can only imagine the grease spots that are all over now. What do you suggest?

— K.M., Greensboro, N.C.

Dear K.M.: What greasy, icky stains those lip balms can make! Here's the scoop from a major manufacturer of lip balms, so read on. This happens a lot! Post this column right next to the washing machine. First, treat each piece of clothing. Use dishwashing liquid that has a degreasing agent. Rub the liquid into the stains (yes, each piece of clothing) and then re-wash in the hottest water that's safe for the fabric. Let air-dry, and re-treat the spots, if necessary. A letter from Bridget in Washington offers another idea: “I know this will sound too good to be true, but I promise it works on washable garments. Any oil-based stain, even if it's been washed and dried, can be removed by rubbing the stain with any shampoo and then re-washing.” (Heloise here: This is worth a try, especially since most hair shampoos are formulated to break down body oil. Put the shampoo on the oily stains, and either scrub with an old toothbrush or rub fabric together before putting in the washer. Let garment air-dry). Hopefully, one of these methods will help you. Laundry stains are part of life and can make laundry day so much harder! To make it easier, I have a very helpful pamphlet filled with hints about how to remove clothing stains, and it is a must for every household. Just send $5 for Heloise's Handy Stain Guide for Clothing. Send a long, self-addressed, stamped (66 cents) envelope to: Heloise/Stain, P.O. Box 795001, San Antonio, TX 78279-5001. If you added too much detergent and suds start bubbling over, just sprinkle plain ol' table salt on the suds, and poof, they're gone.

Dear Readers: Carla Kincaid of Ventura, Calif., sent a photo of her two cats — Echo, a tricolor with peach, and Pinot Noir, a calico. The cute cats are curled up together on a chair in front of a sunny window.

Carla says: “Echo is a rescue cat from the animal shelter, and we got Pinot from a co-worker. They look really cold, but they live in Southern California. We very seldom get below 50. Echo is a lover, and Pinot is always looking for trouble.” To see these two adorable cats, visit www.Heloise.com and click on “Pets.”

Cycling burns less calories than walking the same distance

Dear Dr. Roach: If I walk three miles, six days a week, do I get as much value out of taking my trike out for the same time and the same route?

— M.G.

Dear M.G.: Bicycles are more efficient than walking, so you will burn less calories biking the same distance on a bike than walking. I don't know about trikes — I suspect they would give about the same benefit as biking. I recommend doing both — walk one day, trike another.

Dear Dr. Roach: I am a

15-year-old boy who pops his knuckles. It drives my parents crazy. They tell me to stop and say I'll get big knuckles. I have heard that it will cause arthritis, but I also have heard that it doesn't have any bad effects. Are there any long-term problems if I continue to pop my knuckles?

— E.H.

Dear E.H.: Parents across North America will be disappointed to hear that no, there aren't any long-term problems from cracking or popping knuckles. The clicking sound is believed to be made by lower pressure causing gas bubbles to be formed inside the joint fluid. There is good evidence it does not cause arthritis. It likely will continue to drive your parents crazy. I don't know if this is the goal or a side effect.

Dear Dr. Roach: I am a

78-year-old woman. A CT scan showed I have a prolapsed bladder. I have occasional discomfort in the morning. What is the best treatment? Should I see a urologist or an ob/gyn doctor? Is this a very common problem?

— M.M.

Dear M.M.: A prolapsed bladder, also called a cystocele (SIST-o-seel), is when the structures between the bladder and the vagina weaken and allow the bladder to bulge downward into the vagina.

The damage often happens during childbirth, but no symptoms may occur until well after menopause due to the effect of estrogen. It is quite common. Both urologists and gynecologists treat this condition, and there are doctors with expertise in both fields, predictably called urogynecologists. Treatment depends on how bad the prolapse is anatomically (that is, how far the bladder drops into the vagina) and how bad your symptoms are.

New pope’s views bind simplicity with ‘complexity’

By Brian Murphy
Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — At gatherings of Latin American bishops, then-Cardinal Jorge Bergoglio was often a star speaker about economic inequities in a profit-driven world. He also has used the forums to warn fellow church leaders about drifting from core Catholic values and teachings.

The twin messages are now expected to frame the beginning of the papacy of Pope Francis: Reinforcing the Vatican’s views on issues such as birth control and women’s ordination that will disappoint reform-minded followers, yet showing an activist streak that could hearten others pushing for greater attention to problems that include poverty and international debt.

These broad ideological strokes — drawn clearly over decades in the Argentine church — will likely be accompanied by growing nuances and initiatives demanded by the modern papacy that requires diplomatic skill, managerial acumen and a degree of pastoral flair.

His emphasis on clerical simplicity and populism, including efforts to keep divorced Catholics and unmarried mothers in the church’s fold, could raise alarms among staunch conservatives about a reorientation of Vatican priorities after eight years of strict guidance under Benedict XVI, who spent most of his Vatican career as the main doctrinal enforcer.

Through lesser-known gestures and comments in the past, the first Latin American pontiff also has shown an inclination to expand interfaith outreach to Islam and Judaism, and efforts to further close the nearly 1,000-year estrangement with the Orthodox churches. The pope’s historical namesake, St. Francis of Assisi, is described in church lore as walking unarmed to meet an Islamic ruler during the 13th century Crusades in a gesture of respect and shared humanity.

In his first Mass on Thursday as pope, Francis reinforced his pastoral priorities and service during a brief homily in the Sistine Chapel that was simple and inclusive, calling on all Catholics to help “build” the church and “walk” with the faith. Without such collective spirit, he said the underpinnings grow weak.

“What happens when children build sand castles on the beach?” he told the congregation that included the cardinals who elected him. “It all comes down.”

The pope then showed a sterner side by citing the words of French writer Leon Bloy, an agnostic who experienced a strong religious conversion before his death in 1917: “He who doesn’t pray to the Lord prays to the devil.”

“To focus on the new pope only as a traditionalist is wrong, as is only to focus on him as a champion for economic justice,” said Ambrogio Piazzoni, a church historian and vice-prefect of the Vatican library. “He is both and much more. This will be a papacy of complexity.”

A Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Thomas Rosica, described the initial period of any papacy as “days of surprise.”

But core elements of Pope Francis’ pontificate are already informed by his Jesuit order. Its nearly 500-year history has been marked by hostility from the Vatican over perceived disobedience and independent-minded theological interpretations, although in recent decades, there has been a growing sense of cooperation and common purpose.

The Jesuit ethos is built strongly around academic rigor and missionary service — and since the 1960s an association with so-called liberation theology, a Latin American-inspired view that Jesus’ teachings imbue followers with a duty to fight for social and economic justice.

Francis has disavowed liberation theology as a misguided strain of Catholic tenets. But that does not mean he also rejects the ultimate goal. His addresses and homilies often circle back to the need for the church to rivet its attention on issues of economic failings, including the growing divides between the comfortable and needy, and the pressures of Western-style capitalism.

Such views are likely to play an increasingly high profile in Vatican affairs — and win praise from some liberal factions in the church — in contrast to Benedict, who spoke about issues of poverty but without Francis’ credibility and direct links to grass roots church initiatives.

At a meeting of Latin American bishops in 2007, the future pope called on the church to purge the “social sin” of chronic poverty and economic inequality.

Irish Cardinal Sean Brady, who is among the church leaders alleged to have covered up sex abuse scandals, called the selection of the Buenos Aires archbishop a “historic decision in a number of ways.” It acknowledges the church’s demographic shifts in which nearly 40 percent of Catholics live in Latin America, and it also picks a Jesuit for the first time.

Jesuits “are renowned for their teaching, servants of the pope, but also for the witness, certainly in our country, to the need to witness to the poor and caring for the weak and speaking for justice,” Brady told reporters in Rome.

These are the kind of interpretations that could make Pope Francis a figure of both admiration and consternation.

There is no doubt about Francis’ traditional groundings. He has spoken out resolutely in support of central Catholic tenets, echoing the words of Pope John Paul II to call abortion and contraception part of a “culture of death,” and showing no public tolerance for homosexuality. In fights against plans in Argentina to legalize same-sex marriages, he described such unions as “a scheme to destroy God’s plan.”

But fellow church conservatives will have to readjust — with varying degrees of comfort — to his emphasis on hands-on, missionary-style outreach.

For some, it is a welcome return to the pastoral vigor of John Paul II for a church battered by abuse scandals and internal discord.

Revitalize your wilted faith

Dear Rev. Graham: I remember giving my life to Jesus in Sunday school when I was about 8, but that was 20 years ago and now I've gotten involved in some bad things I never thought I'd do. I really don't like the way I'm living. How did I get like this?

— S.L.

Dear S.L.: Only you can look back and trace the wrong steps you've taken and the wrong decisions you've made that led to your present situation. And it might be good for you to do so; it might help you avoid them in the future.

If we don't learn from our mistakes, we're doomed to repeat them in the future.

The real question, however, isn't how you got to this place in your life — but where you ought to go from here. And the answer is clear: You need to put God at the center of your life instead of yourself. Your commitment to Jesus as a child may have been sincere, but apparently you never grew in your faith, and you ended up dismissing Him from your life. If you stay on this path, it will only mean further heartache and trouble. The Bible's command about is clear: "Avoid it, do not travel on it; turn from it" (Proverbs 4:15).

But God still loves you, and Jesus Christ wants to forgive you and put you on the right path in life. You can't change the past, but you can change the future by giving your life to Jesus Christ and turning your future over to Him.

How can you do this?

By a simple prayer of faith repent of your sins and ask Christ to come into your life. Then seek out a church where you can grow and be strengthened in your faith.

God bless you.

“THE MOST IMPORTANT EVENTS IN THE HISTORY OF CHRISTIANITY”

At this time of year the season for celebrating the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ is center of most all church ministries.

When I think of the horror and frightful injustice of God’s pure and blameless Son being crucified, I am faced with the question why God would allow the cross?

That answer may not be as complicated as it seems. We have a loving God who cannot bear to leave us in the ruins of sin, yet His justice will not allow sin to be overlooked. It is because of God’s love for us that He provided a perfect sacrifice by giving His Own Son to die on the cross. It was an act whereby God transferred our guilt to His Son Jesus, whose death paid the full penalty for our sin.

The way of our salvation, and our need of it, is the most profoundly serious thing that the loving heart of God has ever revealed to mankind. God so loved the world that He released and literally chose to give His only begotten Son, that whoever would believe in Him would not perish, but would have eternal life.

If you have not already chosen to receive Jesus Christ as your savior, let me recommend that not another day go by until such important decision is made. The cross proves how willing God is to save those who come by faith to Christ.

‘The nones’

■ Author sparks debate on rise of ‘religiously unaffiliated’

By Terry Mattingly
Scripps Howard News Service

Like many computer pros whose lives revolve around the Internet, Marc Yoder eventually created a weblog in which to share his views on life, technology, faith and other cultural issues that happened to cross his path.

His "Marc5Solas" site — the musings of a self-proclaimed "nobody from nowhere" — drew a quiet hundred readers a week.

Then the 42-year-old Yoder wrote his "Top 10 Reasons our Kids Leave Church" post, based on dozens of face-to-face conversations with college students and twenty-something agnostics and atheists in San Antonio.

He offered them coffee, the occasional lunch and a chance to vent. They did just that.

"We all know them, the kids who were raised in church. They were stars of the youth group. They maybe even sang in the praise band or led worship," noted Yoder.

Then they vanish. About 70 percent slip away between high school, college and the office, according to researchers. How many return?

"Half. Let that sink in," noted Yoder. "There's no easy way to say this: The American Evangelical church has lost, is losing and will almost certainly continue to lose our youth."

Before he knew it,

500,000-plus people had visited the website and his manifesto was viral on Twitter and other social-media platforms.

Then the agonized digital epistles began arriving. Some readers started looking for the man behind the brash, semi-anonymous post.

"There was lots of church-bashing, but I expected that," said Yoder, reached by telephone. What hit him hard were the "worried voices" of "people concerned that something fundamental had gone wrong in modern churches and they couldn't put their finger on what that something was," he said.

What Yoder had done was tap into one of 2012's big cultural trends, which was the rise of the "religiously unaffiliated" — the so-called "nones." The key numbers emerged from research backed by the Pew Forum on Religious & Public Life and the PBS program "Religion & Ethics NewsWeekly."

The study's findings have loomed over a variety of news events in recent months, from debates about gay marriage to the challenges facing a new pope.

The key facts: One-fifth of the U.S. public — and a third of adults under 30 — are now religiously unaffiliated. The ranks of the unaffiliated have risen, in only five years, from about 15 percent of American adults to nearly 20 percent. This trend appears to be accelerating.

Today in history

The Associated Press

Today is Saturday, March 16, the 75th day of 2013. There are 290 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 16, 1968, during the Vietnam War, the My Lai Massacre of Vietnamese civilians was carried out by U.S. Army troops; estimates of the death toll vary between 347 and 504.

On this date:

In 1521, Portuguese navigator Ferdinand Magellan reached the Philippines, where he was killed by natives the following month.

In 1850, Nathaniel Hawthorne's novel "The Scarlet Letter" was first published.

In 1912, future first lady Pat Nixon was born Thelma Catherine Ryan in Ely, Nev.

In 1926, rocket science pioneer Robert H. Goddard successfully tested the first liquid-fueled rocket, in Auburn, Mass.

In 1983, radio and television star Arthur Godfrey died in New York at age 79.

Ten years ago: Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein warned that if Iraq were attacked, it would take the war anywhere in the world "wherever there is sky, land or water." President George W. Bush gave the United Nations one more day to find a diplomatic solution to the standoff. American activist Rachel Corrie, 23, was crushed to death by an Israeli military bulldozer while trying to block demolition of a Palestinian home in the Gaza Strip.

Five years ago: Protests spread from Tibet into three neighboring provinces; the Dalai Lama decried what he called the "cultural genocide" taking place in his homeland and called for an international investigation into China's crackdown on demonstrators.

One year ago: A jury in New Brunswick, N.J., convicted former Rutgers University student Dharun Ravi in the webcam spying episode that ended in the suicide of his gay roommate, Tyler Clementi. (Ravi served less than a month in jail for invasion of privacy, bias intimidation and other counts; he's appealing his conviction.)

NASCAR Racing

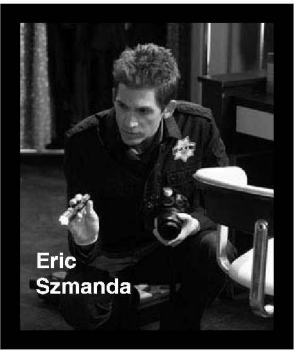

Expect tempers to flare and paint to be exchanged today at Tennessee's Bristol Motor Speedway, where the drivers of the Nationwide Series vie in the Jeff Foxworthy's Grit Chips 300. Elliott Sadler won this race a year ago on the .533-mile oval, coming in 1.2 seconds ahead of Kasey Kahne for his second Nationwide victory of 2012.

6 p.m. on AP
Too Cute!

The new episode "Tiny Giants," features a litter of keeshond pups exploring the farm where they live. While one, Tulip, checks out the wood shop, another, Puck, attempts to befriend a flock of ducks. The real "tiny giant" of the episode is a Great Dane pup named Marvin, who's having trouble adjusting to his rapid growth. Viewers also meet five cocker spaniels who look very much alike but have very different personalities.

7 p.m. on 44
CSI: Crime Scene Investigation

Frank Sinatra songs and other music from the Rat Pack era provides the soundtrack for this episode, in which the CSI team investigates the murder of a music historian whose body is found inside a piano. The case resonates personally with Sanders (Eric Szmanda) who had a past with the victim. Ted Danson and Elisabeth Shue also star in "It Was a Very Good Year."

7 p.m. on AP
Too Cute!

The new episode "Fluff and Feathers" introduces viewers to Finch, a Pomeranian puppy who befriends some baby chicks, and Carmen and Figaro, a pair of Ibizan pups with very different personalities. The aptly named Safari is a curious mixed-breed puppy who loves to explore, and he has a sister, Ella, who'll follow him anywhere.

7 p.m. on E
Movie: The Best Exotic Marigold Hotel

Several British acting veterans — including Judi Dench, who was guided to her "Shakespeare in Love" Oscar by this film's director, John Madden — star in this engaging tale of several retirees who invest in a site in India where they intend to enjoy their retirement. Once there, they find the place isn't in quite the lavish condition promised. Maggie Smith, Bill Nighy and Tom Wilkinson also star. Dev Patel ("Slumdog Millionaire") is featured.

8 p.m. on 14
Chicago Fire

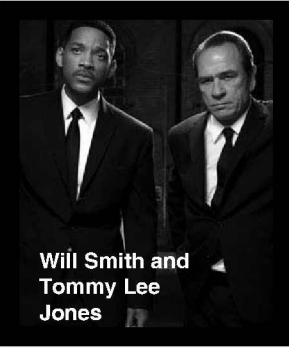

Severide's (Taylor Kinney) visiting father (Treat Williams) butts heads with Chief Boden (Eamonn Walker) over a former colleague's death. Mills (Charlie Barnett) tries to calm down a driver who's upset over having caused an accident. Shay (Lauren German) makes a decision about her relationship with Clarice (Shiri Appleby). Herrmann, Otis and Dawson (David Eigenberg, Yuri Sardarov, Monica Raymund) solve a mystery in "Better to Lie."

8 p.m. on 44
Criminal Minds

Blasts from the past, anyone? Rossi (Joe Mantegna) and his team are in the South investigating a series of murders whose signature matches that of a killer from 30 years ago. At the same time, they discover there's a copycat tracking them and replicating murders they're in the process of solving in "Perennials." Thomas Gibson, Shemar Moore and A.J. Cook also star.

8 p.m. on AP
Pit Boss

Shortywood deals with more fallout from Ashley's departure in this new episode. Already stretched thin trying to cover for her, Ron and Sebastian hope to turn things around with a music video booking — until they learn that Ashley has stolen their star. Shorty finds it impossible to say no when an abused puppy needs help, even though the kennel is full, in "Shorty Is Betrayed."

8 p.m. on HNK
Movie: Tom, Dick & Harriet

When Tom Burns loses his advertising agency job because he isn't young or hip enough, he enlists youthful con man Dick Sweeney to pose as a copywriter. While Tom does all the hard work behind the scenes, Dick presents Tom's ideas and campaigns. The scheme works until Tom falls for Dick's co-worker Harriet and Dick falls for Tom's daughter Kelly. Steven Weber, Andrew Francis and Michelle Harrison star in this new romantic comedy.

8 p.m. on 2
Movie: Men in Black 3

It was a long break between the two sequels, but this 2012 installment of the comedy-fantasy series proves there's still fun to be mined from the franchise. Much of that is provided by Josh Brodin, in a spot-on imitation of Tommy Lee Jones as they share the role of Agent K at different ages, as Agent J

(Will Smith) goes back to the future to alter circumstances that otherwise will lead to his alien-fighting partner's assassination. Emma Thompson also stars.

9:30 p.m. on 6
Movie: Drive Angry

Nicolas Cage puts the pedal to the metal, figuratively as well as literally, in this 2011 action tale. The star plays a vengeful man who literally escapes from hell to save his murdered daughter's child from a cult leader (Billy Burke, "Twilight"), especially since the infant is slated to be sacrificed in a ritual. In attempting the rescue, the would-be hero is helped by a waitress (Amber Heard) and chased by an emissary of the devil (William Fichtner).
